

Creating a digital workplace

No walls. No doors.

Just freedom to do business.

Good reasons to say 'yes' to the digital workplace

A truly digital workplace delivers more than just flexible working. How? By bringing everything together – technology and people – making it quicker and easier to get things done. It's about working on the move, enjoying flexible hours, boosting productivity and having secure connections wherever they're needed.

Benefits of creating a digital workplace

Companies with a digital workplace reported:

lower absenteeism<sup>1</sup> better morale<sup>1</sup> boost in productivity<sup>2</sup> increase in profits<sup>2</sup>

Four must-haves to make your workplace digital

A digital toolkit is personal to your business. The following four areas can be tailored to suit your business:

Productivity

Make the most of every day

- Check the apps your employees use most often
- See if they could be made simpler and easier to use

Choice

Give employees the right tools for the job

- Your employees get to choose when and where they work
- Freedom to select the device that suits how they want to work and access business applications

Collaboration and communication

Work together anywhere

- Give employees the freedom to connect with the people and information they need
- Make teamwork easier and more effective

Security

Get flexibility without compromise

- Protect against the changing nature of cyber attacks
- Build a Zero Trust Security Architecture
- Create a "never trust, always verify" environment
- Give secure access to remote workers

A new way of working – that delivers results

People working with the technology they know best

Greater collaboration and feedback

Better work-life balance though flexible working

A frictionless workplace

An end to information overload

A better choice of messaging platforms
